

who live near Pungo, and Hannah Grace Rew of Chesapeake sang in melodious harmony. The sounds of " Joy to the World, " " Away in a Manager, " " Frosty the Snowman, " and other Christmas songs could be heard in the hallways. # His wife, Georganne, a retired Sentara College of Health Sciences nursing instructor, was visiting. # " That was beautiful! " she exclaimed. # Her husband had tears in his eyes. # " That got me at a very emotional moment, " he said. " Those voices were perfect for that. " # They asked the girls about themselves. Hannah Grace and Cassandra are sophomores at Regent University, studying psychology and business, respectively. Moriah, 14, and 17-year-old Julia are home-schooled. All are involved in some type of music group. Hannah Grace, Cassandra and Moriah sing with their church worship teams, and Julia is part of Young Musicians of Virginia. # Volunteer singer Julia said herfamily has a special connection to the oncology unit. Her mother, Sangita Seaburg, has been a nurse there for more than two years. She pursued a nursing degree after her husband, Warren, died from cancer in 2011. He was hospitalized there for almost a month, and her family got to know the nursing staff very well. # " They embraced our whole family, " Sangita Seaburg said. She is now blessed to work on the same floor, where dedicated nurses helped take care of Warren, she said. The nurses have a special bond, she added. # " We depend on each other, " unit coordinator Badgeley said. # Her daughter Taylor handed out reindeer Christmas tree ornaments