

three homicides in 2015 and most recently, Williams' death in 2018, according to Portland police Officer Charles Asheim and Multnomah County Deputy District Attorney Adam Gibbs. # The 2015 homicides were of Marquis Chaney in March, Stephen Dwayne McCorvey Jr. in September and Laray Seamster in November. No arrests have been made in the three killings, " but everything on the street told us they were killed by the Kerbys," said Asheim, 13-year Police Bureau veteran who has been an officer on the gang enforcement team since 2010. # At 5:37 p.m. on Jan. 21, a local lawyer driving to dinner called 911 to report hearing gunshots near Stark downtown. Police found Williams unresponsive and prone in his SUV, which was parked and still running at Southwest Fourth and Stark. Multiple bullet holes riddled the driver's side door and window. # Police broke out the driver's window and found Williams shot multiple times, in the neck, back and left foot. He was taken by ambulance to OHSU Hospital, where he was pronounced dead of wounds that traveled from his neck to his brain and chest. # Williams was seated in his car at the downtown spot because he believed he was about to meet a woman he had connected with on Facebook, according to police and prosecutors. # But it was Birt and Collins who had orchestrated the Facebook messages starting the day before between Williams and a made-up woman named " Kalliah" to entrap Williams, police allege. Police obtained text messages that showed " Kalliah" arranged to meet Williams downtown on Jan. 21. # Instead of " Kalliah," though, it was Birt and Collins who showed up, walked up to Williams
